

Food wars...

I've decided that the enjoyment I experience while my middle boy eats a meal is equivalent to that of Waterboarding, or watching a back to back episode day of Peppa Pig whilst strapped to a chair with your eyes pinned open.

So far it's taken him 1hr and 5mins today to eat a small bowl of cereal which he was, quote, "really excited about eating". I can't wait for the day I give him some cereal he isn't excited about eating. I best allow a whole weekend for that.

