

Magical Crystals

I've just spent the last 30 minutes cleaning up 'magical crystals' as my boys have named them.

These 'magical crystals' should have been safely contained in their baby brothers nappy but somehow said nappy exploded open, expelling hundreds of pee saturated silica crystals all over the living room.

I can only say that cleaning them up was as easy as trying to pick up jelly with boxing gloves on.

I can also assure you there was nothing magical about them. Yet.

If i win the lottey this week however, I may change my mind.

